The first sparkling wine of Bodegas Vega de Yuco exudes modernity and elegance while at the same time respecting the territory and the traditional viticulture of Lanzarote. Princesa Fayna, the island's aboriginal queen, is the winery's new commitment to preserve and enhance the value of Lanzarote's oldest viticultural legacy, represented mainly by the Diego grape variety.

The grapes used come from the natural area around the Juan Bello mountain, specifically from plots located in a cold area of the island, from centenary vineyards, where this grape variety reigns supreme, its cultivation is traditional, handmade and in pits. It is also harvested later than other varieties.

It combines perfectly with canapés, oysters, a good plate of ham, cheeses, nuts and, in general, with any kind of starter. Ideal to accompany and continue with fish, seafood and rice dishes. It also goes well with meats, roasts, poultry and spicy dishes and laborious culinary preparations.
